Algeria

Summary:

Algerian terrorist groups have been fighting to overthrow the local government since 1992. Al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM), has officially identified foreigners as a valid target and has claimed responsibility for a number of attacks in Algeria. Formerly known as the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat (GSPC), the group is officially linked with Al-Qaeda since the end of 2005. A new group has recently emerged in the south of the country, the Unity Movement for Jihad in West Africa (MUJAO), operates at the desert borders with Mauritania, Mali, Niger and Libya. Among the most apparent operating methods, three raise above average, Road side bomb attacks, False road blocks and Kidnappings. There is a constant high threat of kidnapping against Westerners in the remote areas of southern and western Algeria.
